

PACIFIC GUARDS SECRET OF FATE OF CLIPPER SHIP

Officials Confident Captain Has Made A Safe Landing

DOWN, TUESDAY NOON
Discredit Report That Ship and Crew Had Been Located

By International News Service
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—The vast Pacific, jealous guardian of many aviation tragedies, clung to a new secret today—the fate of the Samoan clipper missing in the south Pacific near Samoa.

Despite long hours of tense anxiety since 12:37 p. m., Pacific standard time yesterday, when the last radio signal was heard from the 19-ton Pan American Airways' newest flying boat, PAA officials felt confident that Captain Edwin C. Musick, topnotcher skipper of the plane had made a safe landing in the tropical waters.

No word has been received from the missing Samoan clipper, down somewhere in the South Pacific below Samoa, since 12:37 p. m. (PST) yesterday, Pan American officials announced here today.

The officials' announcement was made to discredit several reports, one of which emanated from London stating that the lost Clipper had been found safe and sound with its seven crew members "all well" adrift near Apia, 74 miles west of Pago Pago.

Snow Makes Highways Of The Section Very Slippery

Snow which continued to fall throughout yesterday, halting in the evening, gave to the streets and highways of Bristol and surrounding countryside a slippery surface, with the result that several minor accidents were reported. In some instances, trucks or cars skidded into ditches, or into each other, drivers finding it difficult to maneuver their vehicles at curves and intersections.

The highway department workers, with snow plow and cinders, were kept busy during the evening and night, making the highways safer for motorists.

Children, delighted at the first real snow-fall of the winter, eagerly greeted it, dusting off sleds for a pleasant play-time. Skaters, not so pleased, found their favorite ponds and streams frozen over for the past few weeks now covered with snow.

G-MEN SPUR SEARCH FOR RACKET KINGPINS

Reward Money Offered Totals $5,000 for "Gurrah" Shapiro and "Lepke" Buchalter

FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE

By Walter Kiernan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(INS)—Ask J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to name "two of the most notorious criminals in this country" and he will name Jacob "Gurrah" Shapiro and Louis "Lepke" Buchalter. In fact the quotation is the head "G Man's" own description of the slippery pair, worth $5,000 reward money to the person who can put the finger on them.

Right now the two are fugitives from justice having skipped bail in the amount of $3,000 each while awaiting trial on anti-trust laws. Shapiro had previously jumped $10,000 bail after conviction on a similar charge carrying with it a two year federal penitentiary sentence.

But let the boss "G Man" tell the story:

"Starting as minor hoodlums they arose in prominence in the underworld until they were the boss racketeers of New York City, controlled their own organization of strong-arm men and gunmen, which was believed to number from two to five hundred, and collected millions of dollars from the legitimate businessmen of the city.

"They had a long list of acquaintances and a wide range of connections in the criminal underworld and were spoken of as New York contacts for members of the Barker-Karpis gang (the kidnapers of Edward George Bremer) and for Verne Miller and his associates. (Miller who staged the Kansas City Massacre was himself wiped out in a gangland feud along with Charley 'Pretty Boy' Floyd and Adam Richetti).

"Lepke" and "Gurrah" are also believed to have been interested in the operation of dog tracks and slot machines throughout the country. Their main sources of revenue, however, were the so-called rackets in New York City which threatened to become a permanent parasite on industry."

The garment, trucking, flour and fur dressing industries were "organized" and when "peaceful methods"—visits by "so-called gorillas"—failed, there were bombings and dynamiting and acid throwing and intimidation of employees, employees and customers.

A federal grand jury and an aroused prosecutor cleaned up the fur dressing racket and Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey, the "racket buster" waded into the other rackets, sent dozens to jail and others, including "Lepke" and "Gurrah" into hiding.

Derivation of the nicknames, by the way, is interesting. Hoover reports that "Gurrah" is said to be "the nearest phonetic equivalent" of Shapiro's favorite expression—"get out of here." Buchalter's "Lepke" apparently is "a corruption of the Jewish equivalent of Louis."

Shapiro began his criminal career in New York City in 1915 when he was about 20. He was convicted of burglary and sentenced to Elmira Reformatory for a five year term, paroled after two years, arrested and convicted a few months later on grand larceny charges and sentenced to Sing Sing. Subsequently he was charged with 15 other crimes ranging the criminal scale up to homicide but was discharged on almost every occasion.

Buchalter's crime career opened in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1916 at the age of 18. Convicted of theft he went to the state reformatory at Cheshire for an indeterminate number of years but was paroled 16 months later and immediately violated parole. Like Shapiro he made crime his vocation and also like Shapiro he was charged with numerous crimes up to homicide but few of the charges stuck.

Shapiro, now about 41 or 42, weighs 200 pounds, is stocky, has medium chestnut hair, blue eyes, sometimes wears eyeglasses, medium complexion and has an inch scar on the bridge of his nose. His speech is guttural, he waves his pudgy hands with their stubby fingers as he talks. He has a large mouth, thick lips and his nose is flattened as though it had been broken, although he may have had it made over by plastic surgery. He has large ears.

Buchalter is 40, medium height and weight. Has dark brown hair, large brown eyes, dark complexion. He has a large nose but straight and blunt, prominent ears. His eyes are shifty, alert.

NEW HOPE CONSIDERS EMPLOYING A FULL-TIME POLICE OFFICER; SUGGESTION IS MADE BOROUGH AND TOWNSHIP MIGHT CO-OPERATE FOR SALARY

Alert Horse Company of Southampton Conducts 110th Meeting

HAS MEMBERSHIP OF 115

Newtown High School Student To Exhibit His Water Colors

New Hope is considering the advisability of employing a full-time police officer.

A meeting was recently held, and was attended by several hundred people, and there was a discussion over recent disturbances in the neighborhood, and those attending the meeting appeared to agree that a full-time police officer is needed in the borough. Various speakers pointed out that New Hope is a "border town" and because of the important routes of traffic, especially Route 202, one of the heaviest travelled highways in the East, it is thought that a man on duty full time is a necessity.

Dr. Raymond D. Tice, Quakertown, director of the Bucks County Crime Laboratory, was one of the speakers; and Earl D. Blair, Doylestown, addressed the group on the work of the Bucks County Police and Constables' Association.

Others interested suggested that perhaps Solebury Township and the borough might co-operate in providing a sufficient salary for an officer doing full-time duty.

The meeting was held primarily so that council might learn the sentiments of the residents in reference to procuring more adequate police protection.

The Alert Horse Company of Southampton and adjoining townships held their 110th annual meeting at the Trevose Community House.

The company has 115 members, 70 of which answered roll call.

Officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Will H. Yerkes; vice-president, Guy R. Leedom; secretary, Wilbert Merrick; treasurer, Samuel P. Knight; auditors, Edwin E. Ridge, David Applegate, Clarence Boileau; directors, William G. Jackson, Lafayette C. Finney, Charles Gray, Raymond C. Knight and Aaron K. Dolton to succeed H. Ellis Tomlinson; counsel for the company, Charles B. Ermentrout, who succeeds Thomas Ross, resigned.

Water colors by John Foster, of Newtown, one of the outstanding young water-colorists of this country, will be on exhibition at the Trenton Central High School during the next two weeks.

Mr. Foster was born in Newtown in 1908. He is a graduate of the School

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

A Relief Recommendation

IF RELIEF of the unemployed is the greatest single problem in the country today—and not many dispute that it is—then the lack of concern about the way it is being administered is an indictment not only of the Congress but of the people. Because it is clear in every State that the complicated and overlapping system which has been fastened upon us is ruinously expensive and terrifically inefficient.

THERE is not an intelligent and informed man in Congress, or in the Administration either, who does not know that this vital and essential job of caring for the distressed unemployed can be better done at a greatly reduced cost. Why, then, with the national finances in really critical shape and the unemployed load greatly increased by the depression, is there not at this session of Congress an effort either upon the part of the Administration or upon the part of the Congress to get the whole business of relief upon a sounder as well as a cheaper basis?

Identify "Goggles Bandit"

(By International News Service)

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—One after another, managers of nine chain grocery stores today identified William Coleroff, 24, as the "Goggles Bandit," who robbed them at the point of a gun within the last month.

Coleroff was captured last Thursday when he tried unsuccessfully to hold up a grocery in the Kensington district. His captor, Wayne Milnor, 25, of Bristol, required 17 stitches in his head as the result of a battle staged in the store.

The chain store managers identified the accused man at a hearing in a Kensington police station. Coleroff was held without bail for the grand jury on charges of assault and battery, and attempt to kill.

Coleroff told police he had resorted to crime after his North Philadelphia restaurant failed last Fall, and his employees went on a "sit-down" strike.

REPORT GAME RELEASED

Gathering in the Elks' home, Radcliffe street, last evening, members of Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association, elected officers for the year, then enjoyed a program of motion pictures, shown by Clarence W. Winter.

The results of the annual election are: President, Robert E. Sutton; vice-president, C. Donald Moyer; secretary, John C. Johnson; treasurer, Ralph Ratcliffe.

Mr. Sutton succeeds Howard J. Black as head of the organization. Last evening's session was called to order by Mr. Black, a resident of Hulmeville.

Mr. Winter showed a number of sporting pictures. One was of a coon hunt which turned out, as coon hunts usually do, with the coon having a white stripe down his back, and the hunter hanging his clothes on a line to air. Another film showed curiosities of the sea, and mysterious sea life; another gave inside "dope" on a world series game, showing some slow motion views of decisions of the umpire, and proving that the "umpire is always right," though sometimes the spectators do not agree.

The game committee reported that during the year 1937 there were 80 full-grown cock pheasants and 84 rabbits released.

Hold Bread Thieves In $1,000 Each for Court

The two men caught stealing a box of bread from the American Store, Mill street, early yesterday morning, were held in $1,000 bail each for court after a hearing before Justice of Peace Edward Lynn, in the Municipal Building, yesterday.

The men, Thomas Liberty, 25, and Angelo Fusco, 18, both of Radcliffe street, were charged with larceny and receiving stolen goods. They admitted stealing bread on other occasions and also told the police that they had stolen coal and brass. They said that when they had stolen bread on other occasions they took it to their homes. One morning, recently, five boxes of bread containing 120 loaves were stolen from one Bristol store.

The pair was caught yesterday morning at about five o'clock when Officer Ferry caught them taking a box of bread from the Mill street American Store. Liberty was driving his car and Fusco grabbed the bread and shoved it into the car, according to Ferry. They drove off as Ferry approached and ordered them to stop. When they continued to drive away, Ferry gave chase and fired a number of shots after them. One of the bullets went through the door of the car. The two men then leaped from the car while driving along the old basin, back of Mill street. Finally Liberty surrendered and Fusco was arrested later at his home.

According to the police the men admitted taking coal from the P. R. R. yards here, and also bread from the store of William Kalenski, Monroe street and Farragut avenue.

H. A. JAMES LEAVES ESTATE ESTIMATED AT NEARLY $100,000

A Certain Lot of Silver is Bequeathed To Brother, Howard I. James, of Bristol

AND PORTION OF ESTATE

Howard I. James to Erect Suitable Memorial to Sister-in-Law

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 12.—An estate estimated at close to $100,000 but listed at $40,000 and upwards in personal property and $11,300 real estate, was left to relatives, friends and St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, of Doylestown, by Henry A. James, well known Doylestown attorney and former bank president, who died at his home here on New Year's Eve.

In the codicil, Miss Mildred Fox, of Norristown, a relative by marriage, is bequeathed $15,000 absolutely provided she makes no other claim against the estate. All the remainder of the estate is directed to be divided into four equal parts. One part is to go to the brother, Howard I. James, Bristol, providing that he first erects some suitable memorial in St. Paul's Episcopal Church in the name of Mr. James' deceased wife, Miriam Watson James.

SPREADING OF PUBLIC SPEAKING

What's become of the old-fashioned public speaker who used to speak without a paper?

Nobody trusts his memory any more, or the inspiration of the moment; everyone falls back upon a piece of paper that may be as new to the speaker as to his audience.

—Even F. D. R., the noblest showman of them all, invariably reverts to type.

The new oratorical principle seems to be that the speaker should get a fresh kick out of what he is reading and impart that thrill to his listeners.

What really should be done on every important occasion is to have copies of the text put in everyone's hands; as at an opera or a prayer meeting.

This keeps individual interest alive far more than watching an oratorical Charlie McCarthy deliver his stuff second hand into a battery of mikes.

THE TRUTH ABOUT TROY

It is not a strict requirement that poets should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. There is a traditional poetic license which condones exaggeration and embellishment of the mere facts of a tale. Without these embroideries many tales of epic poetry might be better told in prose.

It has been fashionable to consider Homer a better poet than reporter. Some scientific cynics have doubted altogether his tale of the Trojan War. But little by little, as is the way of archeological research, his stirring story has been confirmed in detail as well as in general. A recent discovery, reported to philological and archeological associations at a recent meeting in Philadelphia, is the supposed location of the Scaean gate, through which, according to Homer, the Trojans marched out to war on the Greeks.

Two other ancient historians, Pausanias and Africanus, were exonerated of unreasonable exaggeration at the same meetings. Both reported broad jumps at the Delphic Games which would break modern records by yards. The explanation, it seems, is that a broad-jumping Greek covered fifty-three feet in two hops and a jump, which is approximately today's record for the hop-skip and jump, and gained a bit of distance by carrying "jumping weights" up to the critical moment of take-off. Farm lads still jump that way in the rural sections, though few are critical readers of Greek literature.

Rather grudgingly the archeologists admit that ancient minstrels sang of what they saw and ancient historians told a truthful tale. Homer may have had his nodding moments, but mostly he knew what he was talking about.

The once fierce Blackfoot Indians of Montana are heirs to another of the ills of civilization. They are facing the problem of slum clearance in the shacktown on the reservation.

How strange is man! He despises a cleaner, nobler, smarter one who doesn't believe the same things he does.

Woman loses her power when she tries to use it publicly. A man isn't afraid to argue with one who doesn't live with it.

that it might make him appear foolish now to adopt their suggestion. And that is a thing he refuses to contemplate. So far as Congress is concerned the reason lies not in any conviction either as to the wisdom or virtue of the existing scheme, but partly to the feebleness of the leadership in Congress and partly to the obvious futility of trying to make a change to which the Administration is opposed.

THUS, between an obdurate President, unwilling to retreat from a mistake, and a futile Congress, the country is chained to a scheme of relief vastly more costly than any other and recognized as inefficient. In his recent message, Mr. Roosevelt proposed a billion dollars as a

"Women In Love" by May Christie

SYNOPSIS

When her father's bank fails, Ann Delafield decides to help the family exchequer by going to work. She obtains employment as "comparison-shopper"—buying competitors' products to compare with those of Barclay & Weiss, a large department store, for which she works. Ann is attracted to handsome Paul Bradley, the merchandise manager, who hired her. He is her idea of a real man compared with the young wasters in her society set. Brenda Selz, the gift shop buyer and Ann's superior, who loves Paul in vain, is jealous of Ann. On her first day at business, Ann meets an old admirer, Gordon Gavin. Gordon's father was ruined in the crash and committed suicide, and the former playboy is now an advertisement writer for Barclay & Weiss. Renita Parrish, another employee, goes mad and Ann lurching together and glares at them. Following his father's death, Gordon dropped his rich friends and had found Renita balm for his loneliness. He now regrets his friendship for the girl. At another table, Ann sees Bradley watching her. When she leaves Gordon, Renita stays behind to talk with him.

CHAPTER VII

Meantime, Ann had buoyantly proceeded to the Gift Shop on the main floor, intent on putting over her two purchases.

Brenda Selz was there. Her manner was not propitious.

"Don't you think this fitted pouch-bag is simply the last word for anybody going on a winter cruise?" Ann snapped it open with enthusiasm, displaying its innumerable little gadgets. "And, it isn't really a bit heavy to carry."

Brenda looked down her some what prominent nose.

"I'm. The depression's still on, young lady. People aren't going on cruises this winter."

"Oh, yes, they are," exclaimed Ann. "I know dozens and dozens of people who have already booked passage on the Mediterranean, and for California by the Canal route, and the West Indies, and Cuba. Look, Miss Selz, at this cunning pocket for a passport."

Brenda's lip curled into a wry smile.

"And you really think I should commit myself to an order on the off-chance of a few friends of yours buying these?"

"Why, the public would love them, Miss Selz. I know what women like."

A dark flush rose beneath the olive skin of the Gift Shop buyer as she said, with studied sarcasm: "Doubtless you have more experience than someone who has only spent fourteen years in the buying and selling business!"

Ann was nonplussed.

"Please don't think I'm stupidly conceited or that I would ever dream of setting up my opinion against yours. But this bag's so cheap at the price—so useful for any woman, even though she never goes further than Brooklyn—"

Which was a sad tactical error, since Brenda herself resided in the City of Churches, and had done so ever since her Ghetto days.

"I don't like the bag. It's too fancy. I won't take a chance on it."

"Then these lovely little bracelets? Only a dollar a pair, Miss Selz. Do look at the carving on the big square crystal plaques. Why, at all the balls and parties, I've never seen the like of them. I know this season's debbies, and post-debies, would fall for them, hook, line and sinker," Ann pleaded.

"May I give you a word of advice, Miss Delafield?" The buyer's voice had the sharp clink of ice. "It's to forget your miraculous Park Avenue background, and remember that those lacking it have still contrived to make a pretty fair success of themselves, especially in business. In fact, it does not interest them to hear of the doings of what you imagine to be the 'uppercrust'!"

The snub was so unwarrantably severe that tears sprang to Ann's eyes. Bag, bracelets and wrapping paper in her hands, she walked blindly down the aisle, thinking: "She wants me to quit. She resents that Mr. Bradley brought me to her, asking her to give me pointers."

Pointers, indeed?

Barbs! What on earth did a comparison-shopper do with her finds (save the word!) when they were flatly turned down?

To take them to Mr. Bradley over the head of the Gift Shop buyer would be to make her a permanent enemy, for, young as Ann was, she had a wise head on her slender shoulders, and knew woman's psychology.

"And how did the morning go, Miss Delafield?" Standing near the Costume Jewelry counter was Mr. Bradley himself.

Ann blinked, swallowed hard, then found her voice.

"Not so good, I'm afraid. I—I made an error of judgment."

No use to hide the bag and bracelets from him, for in her hurry to get away from Brenda Selz she had not waited to re-wrap the articles.

"Leave this with me. Meantime, Miss Delafield, you might shop out sales in the store."

"I'd like to pay for these myself," she added quickly, "I mean, when they're not right, not what is wanted, it wouldn't be fair to make the store take the loss."

"Hold on. Let me have a look at them." Taking her purchases from her, he moved over with Ann to the Costume Jewelry counter. He set the goods down on the glass top and examined one of the two bracelets.

"Miss Schmidt!" A lift of his brow summoned a buxom blonde.

"Don't you think this is unusually attractive? Where did you find the bracelets, Miss Delafield? And what did you pay for them? Miss Schmidt, Miss Delafield is our new comparison-shopper."

Ann named place and price.

"Why, I think they're lovely, Mr. Bradley!" Miss Schmidt turned the baubles in her big, capable white hands. "They're beautifully made, and very Frenchy-looking. Most original. I'd say. The women 'nd sure fall for them. That's my opinion. At that price I'd be glad to put in an order for them, Mr. Bradley."

The merchandise-manager took a bracelet from her, examining inner marking and clasp. "Get the manufacturers on the phone, Miss Schmidt—Gus Aronheim for a start, will you?—and if it's okay and they can get the goods over by Saturday noon, say, you can bring the bracelet to the conference in my office at 2:30, and we'll run it in the Sunday ad."

Miss Schmidt moved quickly off. Ann took the plunge.

She looked blankly at him. This was so much Greek to her!

Seeing her dilemma, he explained himself. He had an afternoon newspaper with him. He handed it to her. "Go over our advertising, particularly under the three column headings of 'Sale'!" Then go to the different departments to check up if representations made are actually so in point of fact, and whether the values given are true values."

Thought Ann, considerably cheered up: "A tall order for an ignoramus!" But she was anxious to learn, and only too willing to take orders.

"Afterwards," continued the merchandise-manager, "you must shop the similar advertisements of our competitors, going to their stores and personally examining the quality and workmanship of like goods. Lingerie, for instance. Today we've a sale in lingerie of cheaper quality, and so has Macy's. You could drop over there, and see how the women are responding to it in comparison to our own sale. Of course not giving any inkling to the staff that you happen to be a comparison-shopper, you understand."

"I'll do my very best, Mr. Bradley," Ann said quickly. She was about to move away.

"It might be a good idea for you to drop into our advertising conference at 2:30 in my office. I'll help you to get a grasp of the business," Paul Bradley suggested.

tentative figure for relief during the next fiscal year. It is a deceptive figure, there being every reason to believe that WPA costs will run even larger the coming year than they have done in the current year, in which the total will be approximately two billion. That the Mayors' lobby will force a larger appropriation is as well known in the White House as it is in the Capitol. Nor is there any doubt that there will be, as there regularly has been, a deficient appropriation at the end of the year to take care of the situation.

IN HIS message the President makes clear his determination to spend whatever amount is given to provide "work relief" rather than "direct relief" on a cash basis. He reiterated his opposition to any change that would "substitute a dole in place of useful work." Yet, as the New York "Times" points out, to a very large extent the "dole," which he dislikes, has already been substituted for the "useful work," which he prefers.

under his own system. The fact is that the WPA "never has achieved, never could have achieved its objective and is probably farther away than ever from its objective right now. The obvious reason is because it is utterly impossible to provide enough money to give useful work to the employables without completely bankrupting the country. Neither one billion nor two billion will do it, as every impartial investigator will affirm.

IT IS impossible that the President should not realize this and it does seem that under the circumstances the recent recommendations on this subject of the Community Mobilization for Human Needs should receive at least some consideration in Washington. This is the most experienced and best equipped of all private relief groups. It knows more about the relief problem than any other and its word should carry more weight. What it urges now is a return of the relief burden to the States, with the Federal Government making grants of funds based upon the willingness of the States to provide their prescribed proportion and to maintain satisfactory standards of administration.

BUT THE States and the local committees would spend the money, deciding how much should go for work relief and how much for direct relief, determine who are the employables and who unemployed. In brief, the whole relief business would be integrated. The Federal $1,000,000,000 could be made to go much farther and do more good. Relief could be taken out of national politics and put in the hands of local authorities upon whom local sentiment could be effectively focused. It does seem that the President might accept these recommendations without "stultification." And it does seem that Congress, pressed on the one side by the need for economy and on the other by the necessity for relief, would welcome a plan that would enable it to meet the demands for both.

WOULD YOU BUY IT AGAIN?

All merchants—nearly everybody who makes a living by selling something—can be divided into two distinct groups:

GROUP ONE: The merchant whose goods give so little value that he, like the old-time vendor of gold-bricks, cannot expect "repeat" orders. He must make all his profit from the first (and only) sale. Then he must seek buyers not yet familiar with his goods or reputation.

GROUP TWO: The merchant whose goods are sold in the hope of winning the purchaser's continued patronage. He can expect only a moderate profit. Thus, one sale per person is not enough. Each article must be good enough to make the buyer want to buy it again.

The merchants who advertise in this paper belong in Group Two. They could not stay in business unless they earned "repeat" orders—unless they gave you honest value for every dollar you spend with them.

That is why each article they sell you must be so thoroughly satisfactory that you would later answer "yes" to this, the most important question a merchant can ask a customer: "Would you buy it again?"

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1938

King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD—So many Hollywood stories play up the riches and the foibles of the stars that it is refreshing to find out they are human beings after all. Mother Gruber will testify they are. Every morning at 6:30, Mother Gruber prepares coffee and snacks of breakfast to serve the feminine stars on the Warner lot as they come in to be made up. For her, it means getting up at 4:30 and arriving at the studio, often before it is light.

But the other morning, there was a big surprise in store for Mother Gruber. When she came into the makeup department, prepared for her usual labors, she found the coffee and the breakfast already made. And this time she was invited to sit down and eat, while the famous stars she serves turned the tables and waited on her.

There were Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter and Spring Byington. On this morning, they had gotten up even earlier than Mother Gruber to stage their little surprise.

If you can believe Paulette Goddard's intimates, Chaplin has finally agreed for her to go to work at another studio providing he doesn't finish a script by February.

Bing Crosby has taken on another hobby—dogs. The crooner just put $1,500 on the line to purchase a boxer of championship strain. Her name is Gunda of Barnere, but Crosby has nicknamed her Venus.

The star plans to establish a kennel and raise the breed commercially.

Other boxer enthusiasts in Hollywood include Eddie Prinz, the dance director, and Victor Young, the band leader.

Didn't someone print that Basil Rathbone's son, Rodion, would follow in his father's footsteps and become an actor? Instead, he has taken a job in the cutting department at Warners.

Even a movie star can't realize all his dreams. Errol Flynn is pestered the life out of Jack Warner and Hal Wallis to let him play the role of Cyrano de Bergerac. The fact that his classic profile would have to be marred with a bulbous nose doesn't mean a hoot to him.

But it will to Warners. You can write it down in the book that Flynn will not play Cyrano de Bergerac.

Interesting item about the Edgar Kennedys. When the comedian leaves on a personal appearance tour, he will be accompanied by his wife, formerly Patricia Allen of vaudeville. During the tour, the two will revive the sketch they did together before their marriage 13 years ago.

Clark Gable's suite in the M. G. M. dressing room building is indicated by a brass name plate containing a replica of his signature. His fellow stars must be souvenir hunters or something. For, four of these plates have been lifted from the door. Gable has had the new one welded on.

Tyrone Power's holiday gift to his mother was a full-length oil portrait of himself done by the artist, Onestus Uzzell. . . . Some bold thief stole Fay Wray's electric ice box off her back porch, including a turkey and everything else that was in the box. . . . An interesting twosome at the Beverly Brown Derby were the recently divorced Geraldine Spreeckles and Ivan Lebedeff, Hollywood's prize nonocle adept. Miss Spreeckles, rechristened Anna Johns by Warners, has reported back to the studio but has no assignment at the moment. . . . The Nelson Eddy fans are rushing to correct me about his character names. I thought he had been called Richard four times. But his fans, who say they know his pictures by heart, insist it happened only in "Rosalie" and in "Naughty Marietta". . . . Helen Meinardi, the scenarist, and Van Smith were a twosome at Frank Kerwin's Merry-Go-Round. And this is not their first appearance together at the Hollywood gay-spots. . . . Frances Gifford and James Dunn didn't go on their airplane honeymoon after all. They are living in a Los Angeles hotel until they can find a house.

DANGEROUS TRAVELLING POSTPONES COURT TILT

The court tilt scheduled for the local high school floor last night between Bristol and Frenchtown, N. J., was called off early yesterday afternoon due to the inclemency of the weather.

Many fans who had hoped to see the contest, therefore were disappointed when they went to the school last night only to find that there was no game. However they may get their chance to see the delayed fray by passing through the "gym" door at the local court on Monday night, at which time the tilt will be played.

Frenchtown notified Bristol officials of the cancelling of the contest due to the slippery roads and that conditions in their section were none too good for travelling.

BENSALEM OWLS LOSE THIRD STRAIGHT GAME

By Louis Tomlinson

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 12.—Jim Leiberman, stellar forward for the Blue and Gray of Bensalem, couldn't stick enough field goals in the final period and as a result the Owls suffered their third consecutive setback on the home court here last night. It was Upper Moreland High who dished on the defeat this time with the final count reading, 29-14.

Leiberman almost became a hero single-handed in the latter part of the final period when he counted all five of the Owls' second half points to bring the home quintet to within striking distance of the ultimate winners. One double decker and a foul shot sunk by the Owl forward out the visitors' lead to 15-12 with less than two minutes to play. However, Meinhardt, star forward for Upper Moreland, counted a pair of pretty one-handed shots from a side angle to give his team a 29-12 advantage and to sew up the tilt.

Recession Near Bottom

Washington, Jan. 12.—Predicting the current business decline will reach rock bottom within two weeks, a high WPA official today blasted all hopes the administration will be able to stay within the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation this year. Significant trend along the business horizon—depletion of inventories and increase in automobile and textile production and a stiffening of prices—he said, indicate the point of wholesale lay-offs will be reached near the end of January.

Earthquake In Japan

Will N. L. Slugging Mark Shrink

By BURNLEY

American League slugging superiority in the majors will be even more evident next season, when the National loop adopts a less lively ball.

This slugging pellet will be good news for the hurlers of the senior league, but it will hardly help the damaged prestige of Frick's circuit. The National League representatives have been subjected to repeated trouncings in recent world series and all star games, in which the sluggers of the junior loop proved their ability to hit the touted National loop boxmen.

Apparently the moguls of Frick's league decided to make the circuit even more of a pitcher's paradise. Whether this experiment will prove popular with the fans remains to be seen. There is a school of thought which says that the public is tired of the rabbit sphere, and would welcome the return of the old style "pitchers' battle" type of game.

On the other hand, the American League is standing pat on the present highly resilient horsehide, and with good reason. The hammerers of the Hartridge circuit seem to go over big with the fans, and the slugging Yankees continue to be the best box-office attraction in the game.

Our own guess is that the fans still get more of a bang out of a home run than a bunt or a squeeze play.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 12.—A slam-bang wrestling card will be on tap at the Arena tonight when Promoter Johnny Ipp trots out ten of the liveliest heavyweights in the game. In the feature one fall, one-hour time limit attraction, Dynamite Joe Cox, burly Missouri action provider, will face the classy Boston Irishman, Jack Donovan. Cox is one of the fans' favorite burpers, while Donovan has always been popular with the fans and scored an impressive win last week over Mike Strelch.

A semi-windup that is also arousing the interest of the fans is the match between Wally Dusek, cousin of the famed Nebraska mat family and Mike Mazurki, gigantic Manhattan College Pole. Both men turned in sensational performances last week, Wally holding the redoubtable George Koverly even and Mike defeating massive Jake Patterson. Patterson was battered so badly that it was necessary for him to be carried out of the ring.

Bert Rubi, flashy Hungarian youngster, who has been absent from the local scene, will return against the formidable Boris Demitroff. Geza Tako, another Hungarian, will strive for his third win against Sammy Menacher, classy Bronx Hebrew. Ralph Garibaldi, brother of the famous Gino, will vie with handsome Jack Holland, California youngster, in the opening encounter.

The first bout will start at 8:30 p. m.

JUNIOR QUINTET UPSETS UPPER MORELAND FIVE

By Louis Tomlinson

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 12.—Although Ward, outstanding forward for Upper Moreland's Junior High quintet, scored eight of his team's points, it wasn't enough to upset Bensalem's Junior High five, who topped the visitors in the preliminary of three games played here last night, 14-11.

The tilt, as indicated by the score by periods was evenly fought and played throughout the entire contest. It was the second period scoring that ultimately decided the issue. In this canto, the Owls doubled their opponent's total for the period, 6-3, to account for the final three-point margin between victory and defeat as far as points scored was concerned.

J. V. QUINTET NOSES OUT UPPER MORELAND

By Louis Tomlinson

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 12.—A last quarter rally featured by two last minute field goals spelled victory for Bensalem's Junior Varsity quintet over the visiting Junior Varsity five from Upper Moreland here last night, 17-16, in quite a thrill-finish tilt.

Wally Oppman was the real hero of the tilt, when with but 30 seconds of the fray remaining to be played, he received a pass from a teammate, dribbled down the court, and stuck a lay-up shot over the lip of the net to sink the winning markers of the contest shortly before that. Carl Schreiber had stuck a twin-pointer to pull the Owl J. V. up to within a point of the visitors, who led, 15-15.

A trio of double deckers and Oppman's foul shot in the first period gave the home outfit a 7-5 lead at the end of the first quarter, which they stretched two more points to make it 11-7 at the close of the opening half. In the third quarter, however, Upper Moreland came to life to count four floor shots which shot them into a lead of 15-11 at the start of the last period as Bensalem was held scoreless in that hectic third period. However, in the final canto the visitors could count only a single foul goal whereas the home team counted a trio of double deckers to wipe out a four-point lead held by Upper Moreland, and to turn apparent defeat into victory.

expired term of the late Mrs. John R. Hendricks.

A quiz on the state report, prepared by Miss Gertrude Pope, was conducted by Miss Caroline Black. Mrs. Mary Duhamel illustrated by experiment the effect of alcohol on various substances, showing it to be a dehydrant and injurious to organs of the body.

An article read by Mrs. Beswick was from an advertisement placed in a daily newspaper by a distilling company, which advertisement urged customers to pay bills before buying liquor. Another item from a newspaper emanated from the American Businessmen's Research Foundation, this being an open letter to President Roosevelt, making a plea for 50 million dollars to be used in investigating conditions resulting from liquor traffic, which the Foundation considered a national emergency from the fact that "in the last four years the customers have expended 12 billion dollars for intoxicants, causing an irreparable loss to trade, and retarding recovery from the depression."

Mrs. William Betz, of the Soldiers and Sailors and Relief Department, reported that an Afghan, 130 Christmas cards, and eight handkerchiefs, had been sent to Mother Moore for her work at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, and also that six baskets of provisions had been given to the needy of Bristol. This work was done at the Christmas season.

Mrs. Headley announced that the meeting on February 8th will be a Willard Memorial, being conducted in the Sunday School room of First Baptist Church.

Tasty refreshments were served by the hostesses.
